Richmond Times-Dispatch

Published event day in the year by The Times-Dispatch Publishing Company, Inc. Address all communications to THE TIMES - DISPATCH, Times-Dispatch Building, 10 South Tenth Street, Richmond, Va.

TELEPHONE, RANDOLPH 1 Publication Office...... 10 South Tenth Street South Richmond Lynchburg..... ... 218 Eighth Street

HASBROOK, STORY & BROOKS, INC., Special Advertising Representatives. .

Chicago People's Gas Buildin SUBSCRIPTION RATES BY MAIL. One Six Three One Year. Mos. Mos. Mo. POSTAGE PAID
 Daily and Sunday
 $6.00
 $3.00
 $1.50
 $.55

 Daily only
 4.00
 2.00
 1.00
 .35

 Sunday only
 2.00
 1.00
 .50
 .25

By Times-Disputch Carrier Delivery Service in Richmond (and auburbs) and Petersburg:

matter under net of Congress of Manuscripts and communications submitted for publication will not be returned unless accompanied by postage stamps.

Entered January 27, 1905, at Richmond, Va., as

THURSDAY, MARCH 18, 1915.

Encouraging Virginia's Banks

O NE of the commendable acts of the special session of the General Assembly was the reduction of the tax on bank stock from 51.75, in this city, to a maximum of $1.50, made up of a 35-cent State rate and a $1.15 rate that localities are permitted to impose. We believe there should have been an even greater reduction, but the rate fixed will encourage the increase of banking capital and its profitable employment.

Baltimore's rate is $1.35, and Richmond bankers, with entire propriety and justice, asked that they be put on an equality as to taxation with their principal competitor for the business of this section of the country. Of course, it is possible for the city to effect this equalization, but whether the city will find itself in a financial position to make the concesson, appears exceedingly doubtful. There is substantial improvement, anyhow

Further Returns From New York War

N New York the merry war over the State deficit, or alleged deficit, continues. Ex-Governor Martin H. Glynn declares that there is no deficit and need be none, and that the State will have $4,000,000 to its credit on October 1, 1915. Governor Whitman answers that there will soon be a deficit of $18 .-000,000, and that direct taxation of real estate will be necessary.

Where does the truth lie between two such absolutely differing statements, which are $22,000,000 apart? On the face, Glynn's account is more plausible, and continued discussion lends color to his declaration that the whole deficit announcement is a yarn intended to discredit his administration. The vindictiveness of the Whitman administration towards Democratic officeholders leads us to believe that it would not hesitate at a slight exaggeration when discrediting a hated apponent.

What is $18,000,000, anyhow, to a New York politician?

Again Mexico

us, which has been an open assassination of Maximilian. The Villa-Zapata activities that promise to open full communication with the United States so rudely cut off, may lead to a clearer understanding of the whole situation.

In the meantime, the attention of this country is turned prayerfully toward the entrance of Cardinal Gibbons into the strained situation. Catholic priests are in prison, nuns have been driven out and, it is alleged, shamefully abused, church properties have been connscated and destroyed, forcible levies have been made on the church, and those who protested have been roughly handled.

It is earnestly to be hoped that Uncle Sam may not actually have to go back to Mexico. with armed intervention, but if in the end there is nothing else to do, let it be done

A Lesson in Drug Addiction

VORK, PA., is furnishing the country a lesson in "dope" that ought to sink deep into the consciousness of those who make laws, who sell things that create habit, who contribute to the weaknesses of a people. The other day the Harrison law went into effect, prohibiting the sale of morphine, heroin, opium and similar habit-forming drugs, and putting out of business numerous patent medicines which depend for their popularity upon the possession of some element of the sort. Now the almshouse physician of York is coming forward with a protest against the strict enforcement of the law, declaring that there are in York 1,200 "dope fiends," who must have their favorite drug or become insane. He predicts that, robbed of the drug, those people who do not commit suicide may run amuck and do wholesale murder, and insists that this is a very present menace to the safety of those who belong to the wiser I and saner ranks of society.

It is a matter of common knowledge that one given to any habit, however seemingly innocuous in itself so long as it is indulged. becomes more or less neurotic, verging to the point of derangement, if suddenly and wholly deprived. Let any man who doubts it try suddenly to cut off cigarettes or cigars, for instance, after habitual use. It is a fact susceptible of proof that a man who has formed the habit of constantly twiddling his thumbs, if his hands are suddenly separated and secured so that he cannot twiddle his thumbs. will be visited by extreme nervous symptoms and may actually suffer. So much for the simple habits of the individual, removed from actual drugs. In institutions where drugs are restricted or prohibited, the straitjacket is a common means of subjugation. It ir easy to understand that, while the York physician's statement may be extreme, there is so much truth in it that all over the country victims of the drug habit will suffer, and naturally purged and they begin physical and mental reconstruction.

The Harrison law must and will be enforced, and those who have been victims of drugs must and will go through a wholesome reconstruction. Their sufferings need not be wholly lost for good. Through the mistak of others, men become wise. Good advicee., advice not to use drugs-is generally wasted on any one who has the inclination plus opportunity. But actual demonstration of the hold habit gets on the individual ought to be sufficient to stop many a man or woman at the edge of disaster. If many persons in York or elsewhere go crazy for lack of drugs. let the facts be published far and wide, in all detail. It will be an object lesson that canthese days too many are careless, indifferent, not be equaled by advice of whatever school a lesson more powerful than the hottest sermon ever preached by Billy Sunday. In skeptical in the face of scientifically demonstrable facts. They have to see and know the actual consequences of indiscretion. York may yet contribute splendidly to the saving of many who otherwise would be lost through some destructive habit.

American Honor Not for Sale M OST of us have been accustomed to philosophise sagely and moralize profoundly on the incapacity of the German mind to understand the American point of view-an incapacity made especially evident in German indignation that we should not accept as a matter of course the Kalser's tender treatment of the inhabitants of Belgium. There is ground for belief that we shall have to make England the subject of future reflections along similar lines.

If we are to judge from the tone of the English press, the English nation cannot for its life comprehend why the United States should protest against the recent annexation of the Seven Seas to the British empire-an annexation consummated, be it said, by the simple device of an order in council. Under the terms of that order, there is no apparent reason why an American vessel leaving Newport News, for example, and carrying a cargo consigned to Genoa or Amsterdam, should not be seized just aside the Chesapeake capes and conveyed to a British port. Arrived there, a British prize court would undertake to determine whether the cargo had an ultimate destination within the lines of Germany or her allies.

It is true that there is an oily vagueness in the order's phrases, and that it seems to contemplate the purchase, rather than the confiscation, of neutral shipping and cargoes. It is this oiliness which is relied on in Engand to serve as an emollient to our ruffled sensibilities-to grease, as it were, what England conceives to be our itching palm.

That very conception is insulting. It reduces our national rights and immunities to matter of dirty dollars, and assumes that our honor is for sale-and not even to the highest bidder, but at whatever price an arrogant and insistent purchaser chooses to pay.

England, so we are told, feels that its plan for "starving out" Germany is really far more considerate of neutral rights than a blockade would be, because any vessel caught trying to run the blockade would be confiscated, and the new volume of international law that Downing Street has issued contemplates some sort of compensation. That may be true, in a sense, but departures from recognized rules of civilized war that England now makes have their origin in the difficulties and dangers of maintaining an effective blockade of Germany, and not in any real and honest consideration for neutral nations.

At any rate, the honor of the United States is not on the market. We venture to predict that when President Wilson's reply is received. England will have no difficulty in understanding that this is the fact.

On the Definition of a "Good Sport"

THE letter, signed "An English Woman," CARRANZA is willing to be good, at least to the extent that he will give protection interesting in its revelation of the state of read this from the Lynchburg Advance; "We to foreigners caught in the disorder of that | mind of the bitter partisans on both sides of | are delighted to observe, amidst all the hurrah the great war. To them there are only two sore on the Western Hemisphere since the colorings for everything that happens. The actions of their friends are all white and those of their enemies all black.

The Prinz Eitel Friedrich is a converted merchantman, which has been engaged in an entirely legal war service-a service which was performed by the Alabama and other Confederate cruisers in the War Between the States, to the glory as well as to the advantage of the Southland. The Eitel Friedrich has no defensive armor, and in a contest with any real warship could not last five minutes. Whether her captain is a good sport or bad he, at any rate, is not an ass, as he would be were he deliberately to expose his vessel to certain destruction.

In destroying the enemy's commerce, the Eitel Friedrich serves her country in the only way it is capable of serving. Doing so, every man aboard the vessel takes his life in his hands, for, should a British or French cruiser appear on the scene, there would be no chance of escape. That her captain, in the face of these risks and the further certainty that a cordon of warships bars his approach to the open sea, is yet anxious to leave his present safe anchorage, makes him a very good sport in our judgment.

The sympathies of The Times-Dispatch, as revealed in dozens of editorial utterances, are ith the allies in this struggle, but that does not prevent our appreciation of German gallantry and daring.

There is something, certainly, in the Council theory that the city should not surrender to the State the advantage of the best real estate investment it ever made. It is all right to sell the Ford lot, but the State should pay what it is worth and not try to get a bargain at the city's expense.

When the Governor of Smyrna squints up from his storm cellar at the screeching compliments sent his way by the guns of the British fleet, he must conclude that the devil and the deep sea are both on one side of him.

While we are criticizing various commanders in the European war, it may be as well to remember that Tse-ne-Gat still wages war against this country-and that he is still

In this matter of the post-office, the Treasury Department seems to be inclined to give Richmond everything except what Richmond

If Italy should roll off the neutrality fence, the dogs of war would have a new object of engrossing interest to occupy their attention.

It does seem a shame that Harry Thaw should be kept out of that Matteawan society suffer much, until their systems have been he is so well qualified to adorn.

SONGS AND SAWS

To a Little Boy.

Dear little boy, with sparkling eyes

Where imps of mischlef dance and play,

Dear little boy whose love I prize Beyond all gifts that life could lay On my own pathway down; Oh, could I but your pathway clea Of foes that there may lurk or hide-Of sorrow, failure, doubt and fear And all their evil host beside— I could endure fate's frown.

Dear little boy, whose flashing smile Can banish disappointment's pang, in whom there is no trace of guile, leto whose mind there never sprang ignoble hope or thought; fould I but keep your boyish heart As pure, as sweet, as boldly true, When you're a man, I'd gladly part With all my dreams of fame for you, Nor count them cheaply bought.

The Pessimist Says:

It is a good plan not to tell all you know.

By keeping your mouth shut, the world may be fooled into believing the total amounts to some-

Concession.

"Does Benedick still stick to his theory that a man should be master in his own

"With certain modifica-ons. He still thinks his theory expresses the general tion that proves it."

Distinction.
Grubbs—Mrs. Gabby, so 1 am informed, enjoys high repute as a conversationalist. Stubbs-Your informant picked out the wrong

Chance for Betterment. "Do you expect John to show improvement in

Yes, indeed," replied John's maternal ancestor, staunchly tor, staunchly. "You see, the dear boy already has reached the point where he can't get any

Near the Line.

She—That was a very striking costume Mrs. Daring wore at the opera last night.

He—It certainly was, but to me it seemed to approach very close to a violation of the vag-

She-What do you mean? He-Why, that it had no visible means of

A Study in Colors.

Several white and fleecy lambs, Gambling on the green.

Several coppers garbed in blue Appear upon the scene,

Several golden, yellow notes To square the fines, I ween.
THE TATTLER.

Chats With Virginia Editors

Says the Roanoke World-News: "If Thaw had been a convict in a State penitentiary, sent there for stealing chickens, he would have had several years added to his sentence. But when he paid $6,000 for his escape, he is handed a free pass." Of course, though, a $6,000 escape ought to possess advantages over the common or garden variety, obtained through the medium of a rope ladder and a smuggled file.

The Fredericksburg Star joins most of the State in lament that the Torrens land registration bill was killed in the Senate. Says the Star: "It is perhaps unfortunate that friends of the Torrens system of land registration waited until near the end of the session to bring the matter before the General Assembly in the shape of a bill. This measure was passed by the House, but an effort to take it up out of its order during the last night of the session in the Schate was unsuccessful. There appears to be no reason why a bill to put this system on trial in those cities and countles which wish to make the experiment shouldn't have clear sailing in the next Assembly." waiting of the measure's friends, however, does not explain its demise. Events proved that its enemies, were always ready to wield the ax.

As an illustration of how our transplanted which is printed on this page to-day, is brethren of the press shine in other fields, conversation incident to the arrival and docking of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, at Newport News, that the delicate situation evolved has been satisfactorily and excellently handled by Norman Hamilton, collector of the port of Norfolk. Mr. Hamilton was appointed collector less than a year ago, but has handled the matter like a veteran. For many years Mr. Hamilton was on the editorial staff of the Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch, where he made good, And there was no doubt in the minds of his friends that he would make good in the position as collector of the port of Norfolk and Newport News; and so it is not unexpected."

> "Judging from surface indications and from statements made by those who sounded public sentlment regarding the matter, there are few, if any, citizens of Bristol, Virginia, who do not favor the abandonment of government by a Council," says the Bristol Herald-Courier. Bristol seems to be waking up.

Current Editorial Comment

Difficult Position

What would Italy hope to get taking part in the war? In the first place, of course, the Italian provinces of Austria, Trentino and Trieste, with a strip of the Dalmatian coast which has a considerable Italian population. As for Albania, it would be sufficient to have a guarantee that it would not be under hostile trol; this is essential to the predominance in Adriatic which will be the more needful proportion as the play of forces in the Mediterranean becomes greater. Beyond this Italy's European aspirations would not go; it is unlikely, for example, to try to bargain with France for Corsica, which though Italian in population is French in sympathy, as Alsace was in 1870. But in Africa it might somewhat extend its empire as a reward of services to the allies, and it would look for the maintenance and extension of its commercial interests in European Turkey, while free access to the Black Sea would be an important consideration. All this on the assumption of a victory for the this on the assumption of a victory for the allies; defeat would mean a disaster quite as great as for France, and would strike Italy from the list of great powers, making it Germany's vassal as it was for a time in the Middle Ages. Tripoil would be returned to Turkey, and Italy after paying dearly for its desertion, would be given a subordinate place in the empire of central Europe. The risk is great, but so is the risk of isolation; Italy's statesmen are studying all the hazards of the position with a sole eye to the interests of their position with a sole eye to the interests of the position with a sole eye to the interests of their country. The case is so critical that their attitude cannot fairly be called opportunism; to act and not to act are both full of peril.—Springfield Populifican

Prohibition and Total Abstinence

As for total abstinence, thinking person can deny that it is stronger than ever before in is stronger than ever before in this country and in the world at large. In our assemblages of lawmakers in State capitals and in the national capitals public drunkenness is practically unknown. Large bodies of laboring men, especially on railroads, and in mines, are using no alcohol. Clergymen who are moderate drinkers are very, very rare. The number of saloons in each of our States is growing less despite increase of population. Drinking has been checked in England by the solemnities of war. France bars all alcoholic beverages to her oops. Russia surrenders her immense income from vodka, and her people utter no protest. The question whether alcohol is absolutely necessary to human happiness is forcing itself on a great number of minds that have long refused a great number of minds that have long refused to admit it as debatable. Incidentally, it may be said that total abstinence agitation is much more logical and much more vital than prohibition agitation. Any considerable minority of citizens in any State or country will resent the attempt of a majority to say what they shall drink, what they shall eat, what they shall wear. Such resentment will show itself in evasions of drastic laws in symptom with lambers of drastic laws in symptom with lambers. of drastic laws, in sympathy with lawbreakers, in often-effective deflance of what is branded as tyranny. But win the minds and hearts and in often-enective definite of what is branded as tyranny. But win the minds and hearts and souls of men to total abstinence and prohibition laws are either superfluous or are accepted as incidental to a public policy in which the overwhelming majority of the voters are agreed.—Brooklyn Eagle.

War News-Fifty Years Ago

(From the Richmond Dispatch, March 18, 1865.)

The enlistment of negroes for service, as soldiers in the Confederate army, goes bravely on. Up to last night fully 500 had been enrolled in Richmond alone. They seem to be very proud of their uniforms and the distinction the uniform gives them.

There was shelling of a desultory character on the Petersburg lines yesterday, which was continued into the night, but nothing was ac-complished so far as we are able to learn. In fact, there is no official report, but the firing of the big guns could be plainly heard in this city, and thus we know that there is something

There was nothing doing on the north side of the James yesterday. The two armies are simply watching each other, and apparently each is waiting for the other to make a decided movement.

The extra session of the Virginia Legislature yesterday adjourned to the 29th, when both houses will again be called to order to finish up the special business for which the Assembly was called together.

Two negroes, slaves, named Oliver and George, convicted of burglary and sentenced to be hung, were yesterday pardoned by the Governor on condition that they immediately volunteer for ervice in the Confederate army, Near one hundred men were consigned to Castle Thunder yesterday, the most of them being charged with desertion from the Confederate army. These deserters were from various States, mostly from the far South.

The address of the Confederate Congress to all of the people of the South is being prepared by a special committee. The personnel of this committee is a guarantee that the address will be a patriotic document, and will doubtless meet the situation.

Colonel G. C. Talcott, who has been the superintendent of the Richmond and Danville Rail-road, partly as a Confederate officer and partly as an official of the road, has tendered his resignation, and Thomas Dodamead, formerly with the Richmond and Petersburg road, has been appointed to succeed him. Colonel Dodamead is an efficient railroad man.

The Rev. John E. Edwards, a Methodist minister, well known in this city, proposes to raise a "Methodist regiment" for immediate service of which he may be made the colonel, but he does not mention that as a prerequisite.

There are rumors on the streets that General Johnston has given Sherman battle in the lower part of North Carolina, and that Sherman's men were signally defeated. No official information of this fight can be obtained from the War

The Voice of the People

Definition of "Good Sport" Attacked.

Definition of "Good Sport" Attacked.

To the Editor of The Times-Dispatch:
Sir,—On the editorial page of The Times-Dispatch this morning is a short article headed "A Good Sport, Anyway," and saying that "the captain of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich is a sporting character by no means to be dispised."

I imagine the writer of said article is the kind of man who would applaud a grown bully for striking an unprotected child, and call him a "sport" for running away before he could be called to account for it.

The German captain (and sport) boasts that he has never been in a fight, because he always picked harmless merchant vessels and fishing smacks, and even then was afraid to approach them under his own flag, and even went to the pains to hoist a dummy smokestack, still further to deceive the defenseless men he was hunting down. A man who would call that sport, must have a private dictionary of his own.

AN, ENGLISH WOMAN.

Richmond, March 18, 1915.

Appeal for Catawba Sauatorium.

To the Editor of The Times-Dispatch: Sir,—An appeal from the Catawba Sanatorium Alumni Association came in my afternoon's mail. asking for whatever I might choose to give to help take care of tuberculous people who had not money to pay their expenses. I quote from the leaflet: "We are carrying on our free list seven patients. This means an expenditure of $7 per day."

per day."

Just before receiving this leaflet, I had read

Just before receiving this leaflet, I had read paged a bill that the Senate of Virginia had passed a bill appropriating $7,500 that the Richmond Blues, a military organization, might act as escort to our Governor, on a trip to the Panama-Pacific Ex-appropriating $7,500 that the Richmond Blues, a military organization, might act as escort to our Governor, on a trip to the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Could I only roll up the curtain and show the people of Virginia the sorrow and suffering that we doctors off-times see. Let me have space if you please, to cite the true history of one case I know, and such cases are not isolated.

About six years ago a young man well qualified to fight the battle of life and earning a competent salary as a salesman in a shoe store, thought the time was come for him to build a home for the woman he loved. Bright was the future and brighter it grew when a little girl came in the home. In the evenings when John would return from his work, he would look so long in those little blue eyes, so like her mother's, that gentle chidings would come from Joan, "as his dinner was getting cold." The sun was shining in every crack and crevice of that house, for it was the house of happiness. But a day came when little shadows lurked in the corners. The bread winner caught cold, and his cough lingered, and Joan began to worry. Then the doctor told him that all did not look well for him. His cough continued and Joan began to lose flesh, his eyes shone glisteningly bright, the blush was on his cheek, and Joan would find his forchead so hot.

The shadows were lengthening.

One night John's step was heavy when he came in, and he sank werrily into the chair without even looking into the blue eyes of the baby. Joan knelt beside him and said, "John, is your cold worse." And then he told her with trembling lips that the proprieter of the store had given him a week's wages and told him not to come back—that he was dangerous to the other clerks and customers. Weary days he walked and walked, and when he would get well. But how could be go! The till was empty. Joan comes home every night after her daily fight for bread with a smile to cloak her sorrow. She sees John sitting in the ragged hair, and knows that each day he goes further and further away. If

Queries and Answers

Poverty.

Is there a "poverty" post-office in Virginia? T. L. PORTER. in Highland County. A Problem.

If A do a piece of work in one-half a day and B do the same in two-thirds of a day; how long will it take the two working together? Give answer only to settle a different M. C. WILKIE. Two-sevenths of a day.

Can you give me a good method for killing Write to Dr. Ferneyhough, Burkeville, Va.

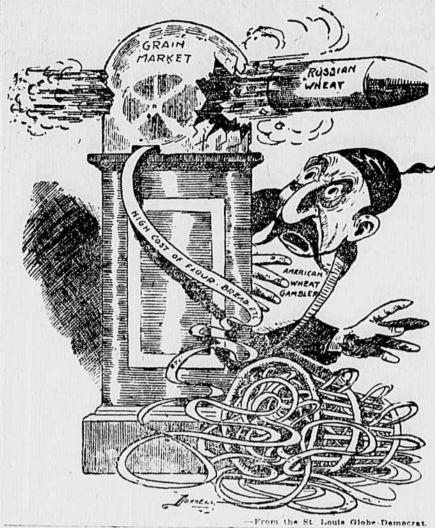

Colonial Teacher. How should I proceed to get appointment and information about conditions as a teacher in the Philippines?

MISS A. W. The Commissioner of Education, Washington, C., will have sent you full information, if you will write for it.

REDUCING HIS FORTIFICATIONS

One of the Day's Best Cartoons.

WAR'S RAVAGES IN FORESTS

Jean-Paul Alaux, an officer in the fire; blackened with smoke, these for-French army, now in trenches near Arras, informs the American Forestry Association of Washington, D. C., as reported in its magazine. American Association of Washington, D. C., as "In certain forcests such as that of reported in its magazine, American Arancourt, where the French troops Porestry. This, he says, is adding to lay in concealment, and where the Gerthe tremendous damage inflicted on the forests of France by the military operation."

He says when Paris was threatened as wefe not cut down by the fire we with capture the forests to the north entirely denuded of their branches.

which might serve the enemy as masks and ambushes. On the contrary, the forests of Vincennes and Boulogne, which practically touch the outer barriers of Paris to the east and south, have scarcely been touched. The territorials quartered there have made some slight cuttiers for use in the contrary of the way the course of the contrary. The beautiful forests of Chantilly without hot soup or coffee. some slight cuttings for use in shelters.

"The winter rains have rendered most of the roads impassable, especial-ly in the wooded regions. In the for-est of Bouvigny, near Arras, and in ly in the wooded regions. In the for-est of Bouvigny, near Arras, and in the forest of Berthonval, the artillery-men were unable to move their guns over the muddy and intrenched roads, and it was impossible to even trans-port ammunition. In order to keep the guns supplied it was necessary to cut new roads in all directions through the forests, using the felled trees for the forests, using the felled trees for the up a position at the Villa des Gaules, purpose. The trunk in sections of purpose. The trunk in sections of about twelve feet, are laid side by side and bound together with ropes and with galvanized iron wire. They are further securely fastened to stakes driven deep in the ground. The first layer of trees having proven insufficient, a second was added. This again failing to suffice, a third became necessary, until, in many cases, three layers of trees are superposed in order to permit the passage of convoy wagons. To avoid the too rapid wear of the wood through the grinding of the wood through the grinding of the heavy wheels and the tearing of the horse's shoes, earth mixed with straw, bark and the twigs and small branches bark and the twigs and small branches of the fallen trees is strewn plentifully over these improvised roadways.

Used to Concept Gives

"Other cuttings have been made in these forests, both for shelters and for firewood. Concealment of the heavy guns on the edge of the forest has necessitated the use of large quantities of the bigger branches, so that the sum total of what has been already cut represents a very considerable damage. A wood merchant in my regi-ment tells me that it will require at least thirty years to renew the growth of that which has already perished so that the forests shall return a revenue.

"The forest of Vitrimont, behind Luneville, has been completely razed. In the forest of Meaux lanes from 150 300 feet in width have been cut at intervals of every thousand feet. This fire apparatus on this continent. In the was, of course, for the purpose of allowing the atrillery to shower its murderous fire over a wide area, as through some glgantic loophole. One cannot find a remnant of copse or thickets: all the trees and saplings have disappeared throughout the razed area.

Newfortness of allowing the atrillery to shower its murder its perfect of 7,059 horse-drawn pieces in service, which showed a total of 7,059 horse-drawn pieces in service, cannot find a remnant of copse or whereas this year 500 cities are represented, or about 60 per cent more, and yet this much larger number only shows area.

Newfortness of the purpose of allowing the atrillery to shower its murder its year. was, of course, for the purpose of allowing the atrillery to shower its murlest year,

Used to Concent Guns.

feet. This was the method of cutting hose cars, 770; ladder trucks and water generally followed at the beginning, when strategic reasons demanded that an area be cleared. The standing horse-drawn pieces comprise 1,780 steam an area be cleared. The standing horse-drawn pieces comprised 1,750 steam trunks made it easy to construct the fire engines, 1,143 combination wagons, barbed wire entanglements and bar-981 ladder trucks and water towers, barbed wire entanglements and barbarbed wire entanglements and barbarbed wire entanglements and barbarbed with prevented any raids by either cavalry or infantry. Recently this method has ceased, by order of the Minister of War, as it was deemed useless and unnecessary in view of the intrenched method of fighting which now prevails.

Felled or Destroyed by Fire.

The plateau of Amance, before between Bombasic and Arancourt, were destroyed by fire (August 22 and 23, bustion engine.

"For several weeks I have been quartered in the vicinity of Arras. In the wood of La Haye, all of the trees the wood of La Haye, all of the trees and undergrowth have been cut practically throughout the whole area of the forest. It was done for the purpose of providing firewood for the kitchens and shelters.

"The forests in the east, which were the seen of some of the most violent."

the scene of some of the most violent encounters at the beginning of the campaign, were literally cut to pieces by artillery fire. The trees within the blanton chemical and head the list of possible. zone of fire were completely ruined.
The forests of the Argonne have suffered particularly in this respect, while the official French statements still mention almost daily combats in the woods

The Germans are cutting the marketable timber from the forests in Northern France now in their possession and selling it in Germany, so Jean-Paul Alaux, an officer in the fire: blackened with smoke, these for-duced an enormous damage. Such trees as were not cut down by the fire were

"that the forest of Montmorency, for example, suffered greatly by reason of the wholesale cuttings which were necessitated in order to give full play to the artillery and remove all growths which might serve the enemy as masks and ambusing."

Trees Cut Down by Shells.

"I have scene normous trees cut down by shells as though they were mere tinder. To the east of Amanca and near Nancy, the forest of Champenous has also suffered greatly through born bardment. The "The beautiful forests of Chantill and Complegue escaped destruction b the enemy, who were not permitted to remain there long on account of the victory of the Marne. Only about 500 have to be recorded huge losses for the French Forestry Domain. In that part actually occupied by the enemy

Motor Fire Apparatus

at present led to believe."

In the United States and Canada there are about 600 cities with a population of 10,000 or over. From the chiefs of the e department of 500 of these citie Fireman's Herald has procured detailed figures of the existing equipment, accompanied in a large number of case by information as to the purchases that will probably be made this year. The figures show emphatically how rapid is the process of motorizing the census which Fireman's Herald "Near Neufchateau, the fort of and many of them are held in reserve.

The figures show that there are new that the figures that "Near Neufchateau, the fort of Bourelmont had been built upon land which had been donated for the purpose by the Count of Alsace. The magnificent forest in front of it was endired felled.

The figures show that there are now in service in the 500 fire departments a total of 8,220 pieces of apparatus, horse-drawn and motor-driven. The 2,323 pieces of auto equipment are divided as follows: numping engines, 211; triple "In the forest of Champenoux every follows: pumping engines, 211; triple tree was cut down, leaving the trunks, combination pump, chemical and hose standing to a height of about three cars, 148; combination chemical and standing to a height of about three cars, 148; combination chemical and standing to a height of authors are cars, 179; ledder trucks and water

Felled or Destroyed by Fire.

"In the plateau of Amance, before
Nancy, the trees were all felled for to be pulled by horses, while the restrategic reasons. The woods of Crevie, trategic reasons. The woods of Crevie, trategic reasons.

It is to be noted that the figures o prospective purchases by no mean represent all the apparatus that wi be bought this year, although they probably reflect accurately enough the paratus. Many fire chiefs have writ-ten Fireman's Herald that they expect to buy one or more pieces of apparatus this year, but are unable to say now

As was to have been expected, con bination chemical and hose cars still head the list of possible purchases, thi year's total being 185. Tractors aga have second place, with 108. Ladder trucks and water towers are third, with 78. Then in order come: pumping cu-gines, 62; triple combination, 39; hose tion almost daily combats in the woods of La Grudie. Le Pretre, de Forges and Champenoux, all of which must cure, 20; chemical cars, 11. The unhave already suffered heavy damages.

"The wooded sections in the east them chief's cars—number 61.